Traverse the North Carolina Cheese Trail for a Taste of the Tar Heel State

WRITTEN AND PHOTOGRAPHED BY KEIA MASTRIANNI

When Fleming Pfann began making goat cheese in 1987, no one wanted to buy it. Thirty-three years later, Pfann and her husband, Britt, owners of Celebrity Dairy in Siler City, North Carolina, are part of the North Carolina Cheese Trail, a robust community of cheesemakers across the state. The trail, formed in 2014, is a statewide exploration of artisan and farmstead cheesemakers and “friends” of cheese. From the mountainous corners of the west to the wide, flat stretches of eastern North Carolina, cheese lovers can taste a wide and varied selection while traversing the trail. The gorgeous scenery along the way is just a bonus.
